here is a blog on 3 important aspects of WooCommerce (https://codetrappers.com/wordpress-for-ecommerce/) shipping that any store manager should know:

Shipping zones and rates

One of the first things you need to do when setting up your WooCommerce store is to define your shipping zones and rates. Shipping zones are the geographical areas that you are willing to ship your products to, and shipping rates are the costs associated with delivering products to those zones.

To set up your shipping zones, go to WooCommerce > Settings > Shipping > Shipping Zones. Here, you can add as many shipping zones as you need, and assign them specific shipping rates based on the destination, the weight or dimensions of the products, or the shipping class.

For example, you could set up a shipping zone for the US, with different rates for standard, expedited, and overnight shipping. Or, you could create a separate shipping zone for international orders, with higher rates to cover the additional costs of international shipping.

It’s important to set up your shipping zones and rates accurately, as this will directly impact the cost of your products for your customers and ultimately affect your sales.

Shipping methods and carriers

In addition to setting up your shipping zones and rates, you also need to decide on the shipping methods and carriers you will use to deliver your products.

WooCommerce provides several built-in shipping methods, such as flat rate, free shipping, and local pickup, which you can enable or disable as needed. You can also use one of the many WooCommerce shipping plugins to add additional shipping methods and carriers to your store, such as USPS, FedEx, or DHL.

It’s important to consider the shipping methods and carriers that will best meet the needs of your customers and your business. For example, if you sell heavy or oversized products, you may want to offer freight shipping as an option. Or, if you ship internationally, you may want to offer a variety of carriers to provide your customers with the best rates and delivery times.

Order fulfillment and tracking

Once you have your shipping setup and running, the next step is to manage the fulfillment and tracking of your orders. This includes processing orders, packing and shipping products, and providing tracking information to your customers.

WooCommerce makes it easy to manage order fulfillment with its built-in order management system. You can view and update orders directly from your dashboard, and use the built-in order notes and customer communication tools to keep your customers informed of the status of their orders.

You can also use a fulfillment service, such as Shipstation or Amazon Fulfillment, to handle the packing and shipping of your orders for you. These services allow you to print shipping labels, schedule pickups, and provide tracking information to your customers automatically.

In conclusion, shipping is an essential part of running a successful WooCommerce store. By understanding the important aspects of shipping, such as zones and rates, methods and carriers, and fulfillment and tracking, you can provide your customers with the best possible shopping experience and grow your business.
