Funnels you can actually measure

Landing pages, funnels and checkout flows in WordPress, instrumented so you can see where visitors drop out and which step is actually costing you money.

Landing pages and checkout flows instrumented end to end, so you can see which step loses people and what that step costs.

Questions

What people ask before they start

Something not covered here? Ask us directly and an engineer will answer.

Ask a question (https://codetrappers.com/contact/)

Usually not. Landing pages, upsells, order bumps and multi-step checkout can live in WordPress alongside the rest of your site, which keeps your traffic, your analytics and your SEO in one place instead of split across two domains.

By instrumenting each step and reading the drop-off rather than guessing. Most funnels have one step doing the damage and it is often the one nobody suspected, so the measurement comes before the redesign.

They can, and it is usually the page builder rather than the funnel. We build them to stay fast and indexable, because a landing page that converts well and loads slowly is still losing the visitors who never saw it.
