Your store stays open

Updates, security and performance work for WooCommerce, tested on staging first. Your checkout keeps trading while we keep the store current.

Checkout, stock and payments watched on a store where an hour of downtime is measurable in orders rather than in apologies.

Questions

What people ask before they start

Something not covered here? Ask us directly and an engineer will answer.

Ask a question (https://codetrappers.com/contact/)

A store has paths that must never break: add to cart, checkout, payment, order emails and stock. Those get tested against real orders after every update, which a general WordPress plan does not do.

That is what the sizing work is for. Caching, database load and hosting headroom get set for the peak rather than the average, because traffic that is fine on a Tuesday is not fine during a campaign.

It is the usual cause of a broken checkout after an update. We audit the stack, remove what is not earning its place, and test what stays. Fewer moving parts is the cheapest reliability you can buy.
